One more fun filled day arrived at Atlantis University. The Grand opening of Recreation Center, with one of the amazing ambiance. The celebration was fused with Valentine’s Day on campus, and made a perfect combination.

We dressed in Red and pink which brought the feel of Valentine’s Day. Of course! How can I forget the food service? Lots of mouth relishing pizzas and snacks. We also conducted tournaments of ping pong, fuzz ball and pool; along with much more fun games.

Winners won prizes such as AMC movie tickets, Starbucks vouchers, chocolates and much more. The students, faculty and the staff enjoyed the celebration and participated with enthusiasm.

Last but not the least we had karaoke, which brightened the evening. Students and faculty participated in singing and dancing along with the music.

The evening ended with fun and laughter.

Pursuing my second semester in AU and working for the university as well, AU has given me an opportunity to make a mobile application for the university, where I got really very excited and working on making it!! well am basically from South part of INDIA and I know how hard it is, leaving the family and staying all alone but after coming here it was totally different everyone were supportive and encouraging which made me to stay comfortable in here.!!

Studying at AU brought an added value to my professional life. The courses were very interesting and the professors were highly qualified. The small size of the classes allowed the use of better learning methods, which also implied a better atmosphere. The AU professors link theory and practice by illustrating their courses with examples from their own professional experience. This learning method prepared me for working life to quickly become professional at the end of my studies.

The MIT at AU allowed me to acquire a lot of new knowledge, essential for the continuation of my professional career. I benefited enormously from the education received from professors who have extensive professional and academic experience, as well as from the practical case studies carried out in groups.

I enjoyed the very open-minded and rich interaction with classmates and professors during my MIT at AU. The knowledge acquired in several courses could readily be used in my new job responsibilities.

The experience at Atlantis is the “start up” about something bigger. I discovered the pleasure to meet people from different countries, different religions and cultures. Being an international student and travelling to USA for the first time added to my anxiety. The program is designed and administered so seamlessly that I not only felt the warm welcome but, my faculty and peers have become a support system throughout my stay as well as a network for life. This combination really worked and I feel that I am developing in terms of management knowledge and skills and in personal competencies such as self-awareness, presentations, teamwork, leadership and negotiation. Classes are taught in an interactive fashion, allowing me to build on my own experience by learning from my classmates as well as the lecturer. Atlantis is a great place to study and keeps getting better and better. They are very professional and willing to help students with anything. I also like that it is a small college; this directly results in more attention from the faculty and staff as well. At Atlantis, the staff and faculty know your name; they know you as a person instead of just a number in the crowd. It’s also very easy to make friends here; many people are young here and are willing to help you. We are taught not only how to cook, but also how to run a business and interact with people from all over the world. To those that are considering studying abroad, I would say, "Do it." There are unique experiences that you can only have by studying in another country. Being a girl my experiences has been exciting and challenging and I know they have developed my character, and inner strength.

America is beautiful. I love Florida and it isn’t a surprise to me that the Sunshine State is one of the nation’s top vacation destinations. After all, it is nicknamed the “Sunshine State,” and enjoy studying.
AU’s Career Services Job Fair
